7. New conclusions of the Dissertation:

Concept: The leadership of Provincial and City Party Committees in the Central Key Economic Region in developing high-quality human resources encompasses all activities conducted by the Provincial and Municipal Party Committees and Standing Committees. These activities involve the participation of related forces in formulating, issuing, leading, directing the implementation, inspecting, and supervising to ensure the success of guidelines and resolutions on the development of high-quality human resources. This contributes to meeting the socio-economic development requirements of each province and city, as well as the developmental goals of the key economic region.

Distinctive Experience: The Provincial and City Party Committees in the Central Key Economic Region emphasize leading and directing comprehensive reforms in the quality of education and training. This includes reforms in general education, vocational training, colleges, universities, and political schools within the provinces and cities, in accordance with the Party's guidelines and resolutions. They also proactively prepare an abundant and diverse resource pool to support the development of high-quality human resources within their regions.

Breakthrough Solution: Strengthening the training and development of the cadre system, particularly key leaders at all levels, who possess the necessary qualities, capabilities, and prestige to meet the demands of their responsibilities. This ensures that the leadership capacity of the Provincial and City Party Committees is aligned with the requirements for the development of high-quality human resources.
